Granite Telecommunications has been added to a General Services Administration contracting vehicle, through which federal agencies will have access to the company's technology offerings.

Granite said Friday the GSA contract was awarded after the agency evaluated the company's operations, among other criteria.

Rob Hale, Granite CEO, said the company aims to grow its government customer base through its position on GSA's IT Schedule 70 vehicle.

The company will also provide free additional services such as project management teams to help with technology installations, round-the-clock live customer service and a customized online portal.
